

Dr. Amanda Berthold completed her doctorate degree in clinical psychology at Nova Southeastern University. She then completed a postdoctoral fellowship in which she received specialized training in criminal forensic evaluation. She is currently employed at Mississippi State Hospital on the Forensic Services Unit as a forensic evaluator where she primarily conducts evaluations of competence to stand trial and mental state at the time of the alleged offense. She also has conducted evaluations to determine the presence of battered women syndrome.